

The Standardbred entries for the 2019 Royal show hit an all time low with only 5 horses competing this year. As usual the presentation was top notch with the Stallion Mynameskenny and Kristie Morrone taking the win. Being the only Stallion in attendance, this entire was awarded Champion Stallion for a second year running.

The Mares had three entries with the judge liking the beautiful big trot of the black mare, The Prodigy, and was duly placed first and Champion Mare. The Reserve was awarded to the flashy Pinto Hopestone for Chantelle Wells.

As with the Stallion class, there was only the one Gelding entry that had the robust Feel The Roth taking the win and Champion Gelding. All three genders came together for the Supreme judging and after displaying a very well-balanced workout, Bec Phillips was called forward with The Prodigy to be sashed Supreme Led Exhibit.

It was just the three horses competing in the ridden in the afternoon and as is usually the case it would be a matter of how each of the horses adapted to the busy arena environment. Hopestone with a Royal outing under her belt worked softly and displayed lovely transitions and gaits to do one better than the previous year when awarded Champion Ridden Standardbred. Feel The Roth gave Jacinta Pope some heart in the mouth moments but composed himself to be sashed Reserve Champion.
